WALKS FROM SKIDDAW TO SCAFELL

Jerry Rawson

This sumptuous book is a journey of discovery through the Lake District, one of the most popular walking and climbing areas in Britain. The 21 walks included are of varying lengths and difficulties, each one being carefully selected to produce a constant variety of interest.

The selected walks explore the main mountain groups and cover the various types of scenery in the Lake District and also reflect its many and varied facets such as geology, history and the working landscape. All the walks are situated within the National Park. Walks range from relatively easy ones to some demanding expeditions over wild mountain terrain, some of them involving sections of scrambling.

This beautifully-produced book, illustrated by over 250 of Jerry Rawson's stunning photographs, gives an exciting and new dimension to the Lake District National Park and will act as a superb reminder of the variety and dramatic scenery of the area. It will provide a tempting invitation to pull on the boots and discover Lakeland's fells, or it may simply act as a mouth-watering souvenir of some of the most glorious scenery and perfection of scale in one of Britain's favourite mountain playgrounds.

Jerry Rawson has been walking and rock climbing in the Lake District for more than four decades, and although he now lives in the Peak District, he still has a strong affinity for the area. His work has featured in numerous books and magazines, including Lakeland Walker and tgo magazines. His recently-published and critically-acclaimed walking books include Discovering the Moors and Dales of the Peak District, Discover the Yorkshire Dales and Discover Snowdonia for Halsgrove. He is a committee member of the Outdoor Writers' Guild.

Jerry recently took early retirement from lecturing at the University of Derby College, Buxton, to give him more time for his passion for landscape photography, writing and outdoor activities.
