A DOG'S LIFE AND OTHER JOTTINGS

David Edelsten

For thirteen years David Edelsten wrote a much-loved column in Country Life, chronicling the life of his household and village – Glanvilles Wootton, in Dorset. 'You would be hard put to it to say exactly where the heart of our village lies, or to name its special talent, but we who live here think of ourselves as being among God's elect.' For the first time, all of these remarkable pieces are gathered together in book form.

With the common sense of a countryman, the clarity of a soldier and the poetry of a born writer, David Edelsten tells of horses and haymaking, hounds and hunting, flowers and farmers, Sunday matins and the song of birds, all making up the glorious tapestry of life in rural England.

This is not the country as some inad-equately imagine – fondly or otherwise – but a sensitive and utterly memorable record of genuine people and authentic circumstance by a man who lives at their heart.

The son of a doctor, David Edelsten was born in 1933 and educated at Clifton and Sandhurst. Quitting the army at the rank of brigadier, in order to be able to live at home, he ran a charity based in Taunton until the writing took over. He is now a freelance journalist, writing principally for Country Life, The Field and Horse & Hound, and reviews books regularly, most recently in The Spectator. He describes himself as 'incurably horsy, devoted to the small patch of Dorset where he lives, the novels of Jane Austen, not to mention the memory of a much-loved dog'.

He is married, with two sons and two step-daughters.
