THE SPIRIT OF DEVON

Lee Pengelly

The landscape and coastal scenery of Devon is renowned for its beauty but also for its infinite variety. In The Spirit of Devon photographer Lee Pengelly attempts to capture the essential character of his native county; from the majesty of sweeping moorland to secret wooded valleys, and from dramatic coastlines to the intricate patchwork of farmland, the views are endless in their variety, with each scene changing as the seasons progress.

The Spirit of Devon looks at the whole of the county from North Devon's rugged coastline to the more gentle southern shore, and from major towns and cities to the neatest hidden hamlet. The photographs here portray the county in its most varied and enticing moods, providing unforgettable memories in print for visitor and resident alike.

Lee Pengelly was born in Plymouth in 1970 and lives and works in Devon. He picked up his first camera in his early twenties and became instantly hooked on photography. In order to develop his skills, Lee studied a two-year course with the Bureau of Freelance Photographers, which also provided him with an understanding of the commercial side of the business and covered all the aspects of marketing his work.

In 2000 Lee took the plunge and went freelance. Using 35mm, medium and large-format equipment he now supplies work to picture libraries, magazines, books, postcard and calender companies and local businesses.
