Halsgrove Discover Series

THE NORFOLK COAST REPRINT

Alan Childs & Donald MacKenzie

The Norfolk coast and the area immediately inland provide the visitor with endless hidden gems. From sweeping views along the coastline, to quiet villages with ancient buildings and hedgerows full of wildflowers and wildlife – there is always something of interest to discover here.

The aim of this book (one of many in the Halsgrove Discover Series) is to take the reader on a journey of gentle exploration. In each chapter there are 'Things to Do' for those who wish to take advantage of the endless opportunities the area presents, including suggested visits to places 'worth a detour' in the car – from nature reserves to museums and churches – and not forgetting a few recommendations for pubs along the way!

With the many photographs and illustrations included in the book, the reader need journey no further than a favourite armchair, but for those who like to get out in the countryside the Norfolk coast provides hours of pleasurable discovery.

The authors are from Norfolk and both have a detailed knowledge of the Norfolk Coast. Combining their skills of writing and photography with a shared love of their home county, their aim has been to produce an invaluable and entertaining guide, both for those who live in Norfolk and the many thousands who visit the area each year.

Lowry-like figures populate Hunstanton's glittering sands.

Burnham Overy Staithe is perennially popular with sailors young and old.

A nautical skeleton lies underneath Hunstanton's unique cliff strata.

The Bronze Age wooden circle, nicknamed 'Seahenge', created world-wide interest.
