THE SECOND BOOK OF SOUTH BRENT

A MISCELLANY OF 'OUT AWVER, IN UNDER AND ROUNABOUT'
THIS DARTMOOR COMMUNITY

Greg Wall

South Brent, or just Brent as she is known to the locals, stands where the Avon leaves the bleak and dangerous southern Dartmoor heights and begins its journey through the tranquil South Hams. The 'story' of South Brent was recounted in The Book of South Brent, Greg Wall's first title in this series which was published by Halsgrove in 2005. There was still much unpublished information and many unpublished photographs about the community in which he grew up. Many people came up to him and said, "You know I could have told you about..." So it was decided to have 'another look' at this Dartmoor community, the people who live here and the activities that despite the pace of change, keep it a thriving community. The volume has been designed as a miscellany of information of what makes South Brent a thriving local centre.

Greg Wall comes from a family who have lived in South Brent for many generations – the Hards. A retired local Headteacher, he is actively involved in many aspects of the community. He served as Churchwarden of St Petroc's Church for 12 years and can claim over 50 years of singing in the church choir. He has been known to 'tread the boards' for SBADS in the Village Hall and in 2007 was elected to the Parish Council. In the 1980's he compiled the two books A Portrait of South Brent and South Brent and its People Remembered.
