

Sky High KENT COAST

An Aerial Journey

Photography by Jason Hawkes

Almost one-third of the people of Kent live in its coastal districts. For some the sea is merely the backdrop to their lives but a significant number make their living from its ports and harbours, industries, fishing grounds, tourist towns and beaches. The superb aerial photographs in this book will be enjoyed by all who know or visit the county.

Along the 178 miles (286 kilometres) of the Kent coastline are to be found some of the finest heritage sites in the country, together with exceptional habitat of international importance for wildlife. The landscapes include towering cliffs, lonely marshlands, popular holiday towns, international ports and tiny harbours. Kent also has the busiest passenger ferry port in Northern Europe and the largest installed offshore wind farm in the UK.

Sky High Kent Coast is the perfect memento.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Jason Hawkes is one of the country's best-known photographers specialising in aerial photography. From his base near London he travels worldwide to produce images for books, advertising and design. Since 1991 he has provided photographs for major international companies including Nike, HSBC, Ford, Rolex, Toyota and BP. The images in this book and the sister publications in the series were specially commissioned by Halsgrove.

SKY HIGH KENT COAST

Walmer Castle became the official residence of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports in 1708.

South Foreland lighthouse, today a visitor attraction.

A superb view up the coast from Dymchurch looking towards Hythe, Sandgate and Folkestone.

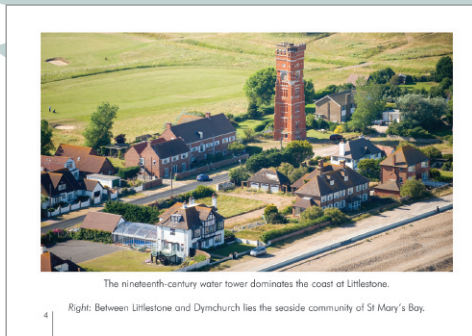

Royal Terrace, Margate.

Looking east over Folkestone, Dover far distant.

Looking out to sea over the marina and beaches at Ramsgate.

The nineteenth-century water tower dominates the coast at Littlestone.
Right: Between Littlestone and Dymchurch lies the seaside community of St Mary's Bay.

Example of a double-page spread.
